But the laissez faire policy of the present Government evidently extends to all Departments, and they do not care to put themselves to any trouble to investigate troublesome complaints. The manner in which the subject has been bandled by the Colonial office reflects little credit upon that Department. The matter has been under consideration long drough to permit of a more careful examination than has palpably been given to it. The brief reply vouchsafed to Mr. RYRIE shirks the actual question at issue altogether, and might well have been written defended. from a most cursory glance at the Protest. ARTHUR KONNEDY is implied here, first in not being present in the city on the night of the typhoon, and secondly, in not accoding to the demand for an inquiry into Captain DEANE's course on that memorable night, and deciding on the spot whether the complaints were well founded or not. But there is no reference to the other complaints made nor is there any credence given to the statement of the authors of the Protest, It appears to be taken for granted by Lord CAR: NARVON that Captain Deane was, on that year to be passed in solitary confinement, occasion, fully equal to the proper performance of the duties of his office, and probably adopted the course which he deemed most judicious and advisable for all parties. guilty. His conduct in future will be scrutinized closely, and a repetition of what occurred last September might have more serious results. Mistakes may be forgiven and time forgotten if not repeated, and there is no disposition on the part of the community to rake up old errors. Captain DEANE probably erred more from want of knowledge of the consequences of the line of action-he adopted than from any intention to jeopardise property or life. He came to his duties without previous training for them and much of the blame of his acts falls properly therefore on those who appointed him to his office. He proved a failure on this crucial occasion when presence of mind and HALL& HOLTZ and KELLY administrative ability were signally called for. But he may perhaps improve, and though never likely to be a great success in his partment, may avoid the perpetration of the mistakes which last autumn aroused such a storm of just indignation. We also trust that the Government will not fail to mark the tone of Earl Carnaryon's reply. He evidently seems to think that the matter should have been determined here—that. in fact, an inquiry should have been held. Th reference to the Colonial office will not have been quite without fruit if it succeed in convincing Sir ARTHUR KENNEDY that his refusal to hold this inquiry was unjust and

THE AMERICAN TOBACCO CROP. The New York Financial and Commercial Mironicle reports very nawelcome news for smokers. There was a serious failure of the obireco erop last your throughout the United states. During the summer and early autumn intense drought parched up the growing crop, and severe frosts in October completed the inury done by heat and want of rain. The result was that, while the yield of tobacco in 1873 amounted to 294,600 hhds., in 1874 it is estimated not to exceed 114,000 blds., or not greatly more than one-third of the previous season's outturn. As a matter of course, this extraordinary falling off in production was immediately followed by a very active speculation. Seeing that the orop was so short, speculators. for the rise bastened to secure as much as possible of it, and prices in a very brief time were more than doubled. It was hoped that the riso full would soon take place; but this expectation has not as yet been realized. Under its inluence, however, there occurred un extraordinary falling off in the regular trade purchases. both for home and foreign account. Thus, from New Year's Day to the end of April the exports from the principal American ports amounted in 1874 to 33,355 hade, but during the corresponding period of the present year they fell to 20,037 blds. showing a decrease of purchases for foreign consumption during the four months of 13,268 hade, or about 40 per cent. IN THE FURNACE. Thou passest through the fire, my heart, God's furnace of refining grief; The cruel flames around thee lead. They rise and fall, they curl and croop, Pray God their work be brief.

The fire is fierce and hot, my heart? It hungers for thine hearded gold. It thirsts to drink thy bitter tears. It strives to clutch the hopes and fears Thy inmost life doth hold.

Fear not to feed the flame, my heart, With all thy gold stored up so long *The fire of wee doth not destroy, Hut purifice from all alloy, And perfect makes and strong.

Thou art not there alone, my heart, Good angels go before, behind: For cheer and counselling, whose wings Do make with holy winnowings A moist and whistling wind, And one is sitting near my heart.

For ever bending down to see

Thy molten gold, thy humbled will-Thy strength to suffer lying still, Whose look doth comfort thee. He waits with patience, oh! my heart, He bore himself that crucial heat; He stills thy trombling, makes thee strong, Decides thy trial short or long, And counts thine every heat.

And when he sees on thee, my heart, this perfect image, mirrored plain (It may be in a little while). Himself shall draw thee with a smile. From out the fires of pain,

LAZINESS AND SMOKING. What his cup of tea or his glass of beer is to an Englishman; that his cigarillo is to the Spaniard. Every beggar has his little packet of cigarette papers (papel de bilo), bought for about a farthing, and his loose, pouch of tobacco, not at all like English -tobacco, but the leaf of which the eigar is made, cut into small shreds, and sold at a very cheap rate; much, of it is mere dust, but it smokes well. With the Spaniards the cigarillo covers all difficulties. Are you dull and sad? Well, no one, say they, ever committed suicide with a cigarette in his mouth take out your 'papel,' fill it with tobacco, rubbed to powder in the palm of the left hand, light it, and smoke; the odds are you will forget to commit the crime in question Does conversation flag?—the little civarilla is instantly had recourse to. Is an argument getting too hot?-light the cigarillo, both of you, and you are friends at once! The bacigarillo, or paper cigarette, Spain is, where a 'dish of ten! is all but unknown, 'the cup which cheers (and soothes!) but not inebriates.' Every Spaniard, good appetite; but tobacco is necessary.' In England we should just reverse this saying *- The characteristic failing of Spaniards of all classes is laziness—simple, sheer laziness. We know well that the inhabitants of a hot climate are naturally less energetic than those braced up by cold; but that fact alone will not account for all. I venture, then, to hazard this suggestion—that the reason why the Spaniard is so lazy, so disirclined for active mental or bodily exertion, is simply this, that he smokes too much. The Spaniards certainly have degenerated. They are not what they were in the olden days of their maritime glory; and I put it down to their habit of intense smoking."-From Mr. Rose's " Untrodden Spain."
